Tonight's match: The Rochester Rhinos host the Charleston Battery in their 2011 home opener. Tonight is the first meeting between the two clubs since September 18, 2009 in Rochester. That match resulted in a 0-0 draw.

The Rhinos will be playing their first match in two weeks after their match last weekend in Harrisburg was postponed due to weather conditions. Charleston arrives for the match after having played the Riverhounds in Pittsburgh last night. The two sides battled their way to a 1-1 draw despite the Battery playing much if the second half with ten men after Evan Taylor was sent off midway through the second stanza.

Charleston is playing its second consecutive weekend of back-to-back matches. Last week Battery earned four points with a win over Charlotte and a scoreless draw with Pittsburgh.

Rochester is 11-7-6 all-time against Charleston, 6-2-4 all-time at home and 1-2-2 at Sahlen's Stadium.

Home Openers: Rochester is 0-2-3 all-time in home openers at Sahlen's Stadium. They have a 4-6-5 all-time mark in home openers overall.

Between the Pipes: Tonight marks the first time since 2004 that the Rhinos make their first start at home without Scott Vallow in goal. Vallow retired after last season after nine seasons in Rochester.

USL Pro News: The Richmond Kickers (5-0-0) and Wilmington Hammerheads (2-0-0) are the only two unbeaten teams remaining in USL Pro. The Kickers have a goal differential of +11 already this season outscoring their opponents 13-2.

Next Match: The Rhinos will take on the Harrisburg City Islanders on Tuesday, May 10. The game is a scheduled make-up after their match on April 30 was postponed. Kick-off for the match is slated for 7:00 p.m.

Next Home Match: Rochester will be at home next Saturday
